

For our database, we chose to use MySQL. We have two tables, one which stores usernames, user preferences, and passwords, and another table which stores event id, events, and event location. As of now, they do not have any relation each other, but in the future we hope to connect user preferences with local events.

Scripts will be provided in Python through Django.

